Moread in the country is more substantially built or completely farmished. It eccupies the position of a trunk road—is located in the Great Miami Valley, the most densely populated and richest portion of Obio—the important cities of Cincinnati and Dayton being the termini of the road. It cannets at Hamilton with the Junction Road, now in progress to Indianapolis, and with the Eston, Richmond and Chicago Road, nearly completed to Logansport and in progress to Chicago. At Dayton, it connects with the Mad River and Lake Erle Road to Sandashy—with the Dayton and Michigan Road, finished to Figure and in progress to Tolodo and Detroit—and with the Greenville and Mismi Road, finished to Union and in progress to Fort Wayne.

The Road was opened for business in the Fall of 1831, since which time seven eightins of its earnings have been from local traffic. The past year its sfit ings averaged $8.471.71 per mile. These carnings will doubtless be increased fifty per cent when the various connecting Roads, referred to above, are fully extended and completed.
